MESSAGE FROM THE EDITOR

The snap of a screened door, the patina of old wood floors, the charm of bead board walls and claw-foot tubs, these are just some of the things we love about old houses. But many of us find the task of restoring an old house daunting. New Old House explores how to capture old house charm in new dwellings. Not your grandmother's house, new old houses offer the latest amenities and technologies in new construction all wrapped in a home that is full of character and a sense of place. Whether it's an Ohio Greek Revival, California Bungalow, or New England Cape cottage, New Old House brings to light the ideas and principles integral to creating period inspired houses.

New Old House reaches readers passionate about their home projects. Our readers want a magazine that focuses on the sensibilities of period character—not just the throw pillows—while incorporating the creature comforts of today. New Old House offers ideas and inspiration for impeccable traditional design. Readers use New Old House as a source for building materials, eco-friendly ideas, traditional architects, and craftspeople. It is the perfect media outlet for reaching the discerning homeowner serious about the design of their homes and the products and services they use to create that sense of timeless charm.

Sincerely,
